DISSERTATION ABSTRACT

Zero tolerance discipline policies like 'No Excuses' have been celebrated, packaged and sold to people of color as the prescription for academic proficiency and career excellence. However, many researchers contend that these policies may be discriminatory, ineffective, and closely linked to the prison pipeline. Critically, many of the students who attend 'No Excuses' charter schools with strict discipline policies are young Black males who have faced, or are facing an inordinate amount of cumulative trauma in their lives. Yet, few research studies exist questioning if there are psychological and emotional costs associated with navigating such a culture. Therefore, my dissertation will examine how cumulative trauma impacts the ways in which Black males navigate 'No Excuses' charter schools and the roles that school administrators' play in their scholastic experiences.

TEACHING SEMINARS

College Adjustment & Transition Seminars for Freshmen

The purposes of these seminar were to help students successfully complete their first year as college students through candid activities and interactive exercises.

Michigan Test for Teacher Certification (MTTC) Professional Readiness Examination

The purposes of these seminar were to acclimate students to the structure and content of the MTTC through engaging activities and study sessions as well as to prepare them to pass the exam and apply to the Michigan State University College of Education after their sophomore year of undergraduate study.

ADVISING SERVICE

Provided support in the monitoring and retention of 8 Urban Education Cohort Program (UECP) undergraduate males of color identified for retention and intervention services via the Success Plan Inventories (SPI) as deemed necessary by the UECP Program Director. Academic, emotional and social support is provided weekly for some students and bi-weekly for others depending on the severity of their holistic needs.

MALE MENTORING INITIATIVE SERVICE

Envisioned and directed a male mentoring initiative in the College of Education that matches undergraduate males of color in the UECP Program with professors and staff of color from around the Michigan State University community. The program was created for undergraduate males of color to personally connect, consult and cultivate relationships with faculty members and staff from their own racial/ethnic groups. More importantly, the male mentoring initiative is intended to serve as a lever in retaining, matriculating and successfully graduating undergraduate males of color with teaching aspirations.
